Major General Harry C. Hale is Commander of the 84th Division, National Army, at Camp Zachary Taylor, Louisville, Kentucky. The division is composed of selected men from Indiana, Kentucky and Illinois.

General Hale took command at Camp Zachary Taylor on the sixth day of October, 1917, upon his arrival from China where he had been stationed for two years. He is a most capable executive and has an unlimited capacity for work. He is a strict disciplinarian but is absolutely impartial and fair in administering discipline. He was born in Knoxville, Illinois, July 10, 1861; graduated from West Point at the age of eighteen with high honors. He served with distinction in the Indian and Philippine Wars and has since been assigned to some of the most important posts in the United States service. He recently returned from a visit to the European battlefields with a message of good cheer for the people of the United States.

OUR GENERAL

General Hale's Message

When Major General Hale returned from Europe he delivered the following message to the officers and men of the Eighty-Fourth Division at Camp Taylor:

To all Officers and Enlisted Men of the Lincoln Division:

1. The Division Commander is glad to be back with his division and he notes with satisfaction many indications that during his absence the command has not been idle.

2. Experience along the Western front confirms the already realized conception of the seriousness of our job and the necessity for great and continuous effort required for the successful accomplishment of our ends.

3. I take this occasion to impress upon the officers the magnitude of their responsibilities under present conditions. You are responsible not only for the lives of your men, but also for the success of our arms. In order that you may fulfill your duties you will have to continuously and conscientiously study thoroughly every ramification of your complex profession. The education of an officer cannot be completed in a training camp. There he receives but elementary instruction. To perfect his military education he must take advantage of every opportunity which offers for military enlightenment.

4. To both officers and enlisted men I wish to emphasize the absolute necessity for the development and maintenance of a high discipline throughout every unit of the command. The peculiar features of the war now being fought are such as to have rendered more vitally important than before the existence of perfect discipline as an essential to success. This is the first great factor in the absence of which all our military drill and maneuver will have been in vain. And this discipline must be a discipline not only for the parade, but it must be a discipline that enters into the very character of the man—it must be a discipline moral, mental and physical.

5. Your comrades abroad and your allies on all the fronts are looking forward to your arrival and assistance. This should be a stirring thought, but it carries with it the immense responsibility that rests upon you. Upon your training, your discipline and your efficiency will not only you yourselves, but the great country to which you belong be weighed and judged by those allies and by the world at large.

6. Let us keep before us then the two main objects of our lives at this time—the first to confront the enemy, the second to defeat him. And let us realize that to attain these ends the stern necessity of constant and continuous work is forced upon us. This is no holiday time. Every true American can be content these days only when he is at work, and that work in the interest of his country.

HARRY C. HALE,

Major General N. A., Commanding Eighty-Fourth Division.

SELECTED MEN ARRIVE AT THE CAMP

Camp Zachary Taylor

By Maurice Dunn

(Accredited Correspondent to Camp Zachary Taylor, Ky.)

Six months ago Jefferson County, Kentucky, contained within its borders the largest city in the state. Today it embraces the two largest and most important communities in Kentucky. One is Louisville and the other is Camp Zachary Taylor, one of the sixteen cantonments erected for the instruction of the nation's selected army.

Of the two it is easily conceivable that Camp Zachary Taylor is the more important. In its wellbeing are entwined the heart strings of the families of three states, Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois. It is from these states that the inhabitants of the new city are drawn. Forty thousand who were formerly scattered through the cities, villages and countryside of the three states are today entering the preliminary stages of a new life, mingling in the close communion of a new brotherhood; an order which has vowed not to return to the old life until the objects for which they left home have been attained.

Camp Zachary Taylor was not a wilderness yesterday. It sprang out of the most arable soil in the vicinity of Louisville. Its products played a great part in feeding the metropolis of the state. But today the cornstalks that waved over the hundreds of acres have been replaced by so many rifles; farm houses and barns have given way to headquarters and barracks and the regular trim rows of potato vines have been succeeded by clean, white ribbons of paralleling streets. Dirt footpaths and rutted wagon roads have been erased to make way for macadam and asphalted pikes, the surfaces of which refuse to hold water. A street car line which penetrates into the middle of the camp is built over the graves of vegetable beds and the vanished sod of pasture land. In short, a pastoral idyl has been completely painted out by the brush of a military artist.

Louisville Selected.

It was on a Monday afternoon on June 11, 1917, that a telling message came over the wires nominating Louisville for one of the sixteen cantonments. For weeks before committees of the Louisville Board of Trade headed by Mr. Fred M. Sackett had worked hard in laying their offer before the government in an effort to obtain one of the camps. It was a joyful day to all of Louisville when she learned that she had been one of the lucky ones.

Camp Zachary Taylor is located just Southeast of the Southern border of Louisville. It is reached by two main arteries of traffic, the Preston street road and the Poplar Level road. Along the former runs a street car line that was extended from the city and which affords excellent service. The center of the camp skirts along the Poplar Level road to almost the Eastern Parkway and is an ideal road for automobile traffic. The big home for the fighting sons of democracy has a total acreage of 2,730.72 acres. It is divided as follows: Main camp, 1,151.39; hospital group, 105.56; warehouse group, 36.73; maneuver field, 1,234; parade triangle, 31.53, and civilian group, 90.61. Nearly fourteen miles of smooth roadway traverse the soldier city.

In the camp there are 1,450 buildings, of which 365 are barrack buildings, the sleeping and living quarters of some 44,000 soldiers. When the camp is fully operated, 11,000 animals are quartered at the Remount Station. From the headquarters of the Eighty-Fourth Division at Camp Zachary Taylor, located at Poplar Level road and Taylor avenue, is 6.9 miles to the Jefferson County court house at Fifth and Court Place. It is 6.7 miles to the Rifle Range from the same headquarters. This summer will be marked by the booming guns on an Artillery Range situated between West Point and Elizabethtown, Ky., a distance of twenty miles from Louisville. Here long leases have been taken on 18,000 acres of land, of ample size to fire field pieces at actual targets.

Made Quick Work.

Just fourteen days after the announcement was made that Louisville had secured the camp site, the contract was let to Mason & Hanger, a Kentucky firm. Major Frank E. Lamphere, U. S. R. C., became the constructing quartermaster and Mr. James B. Wilson, the chief engineer of the Louisville Water Company became the chief engineer.

On June 25 the first stake for the first building was driven. At the time of the writing of this narrative construction is still in progress on many buildings, including a medical officers' quarters and medical enlisted personnel barrack buildings, additional wards to the Base Hospital, besides a rest room for convalescent soldiers erected by the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A.

Some idea of the size of the task is had when it is considered that for Camp Zachary Taylor there were required 25,000,000 feet of lumber, 1,700,000 square feet of wall board, 37,000 window sashes, 32,000 square feet of prepared roofing, 37,000 square feet of wire screening, 6,457 solid board doors and 2,665 kegs of nails. For the water supply 85,000 feet of pipe ranging in diameter from one to twelve inches had to be secured and laid; for the sewers over 100,000 feet of pipe of varied sizes. At the first temporary homes for several thousand workmen had to be provided.

The plans for the completion of the camp called for September 1 and predictions were frequent that this was impossible. But behind the work there was the tremendous driving force of necessity led by Major Lamphere, who is accustomed to speed in construction. The government had the absolute cooperation of every trade. Many Louisville firms and others in the vicinity turned aside from other contracts to furnish the materials needed in record time and the railroads gave these materials priority over their lines.

Material Required.

Here are a few of the articles that were bought from Louisville firms for the construction of the camp: Twenty-eight thousand square feet of roofing; twenty car loads of nails and hardware; twenty car loads of plumbing, 192 car loads of tanks, heaters and stoves, ranges, pipes, electrical equipment,

MARCHING THROUGH THE STREETS OF LOUISVILLE ON WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY—REAL SOLDIERS AFTER SIX MONTHS' SERVICE

refrigerators and the like; railroad material for five miles of track, 114 car loads of ballast, ten car loads of electric light poles and 175 car loads of sand. Those are a few of the things that are required to make complete the home for the comfort and health of the soldiers from three states.

Camp Zachary Taylor was built to hold one complete division plus certain additional units such as the One Hundred and Fifty-Ninth Depot Brigade, the Quartermaster Corps, Base Hospital, the Seventeenth Regular Brigade, recruit depot and many other smaller organizations that when at full strength will bring its population to nearly 44,000 men.

Good architects designed the barracks that are now the temporary homes of these sons of three states. But they were not allowed to exercise any of the flights so dear to the professional house planner's heart. Instead they were ordered to a most rigid simplicity. In this they have succeeded decidedly.

The barrack buildings of the camp are uniformly forty-three feet in width and from 200 to 250 feet in length. Upon their ground floor a broad hall with a door at each end divides them across the middle. At one side of this hall is the mess room, its backless benches designed to seat the entire company at a single time. There is an open kitchen at one end of this room with a serving counter which helps keep the hungry rookie from overwhelming friend cook and his helpers.

Up to this counter three times a day march the soldier boys, meat pans and drinking cups in hand. When both are filled it is back to these benches and the long pine tables which front them. The tables are bare, of course. Simplicity and speed. The writer of the narrative was talking to a quartermaster during the early days of the camp construction when he said:

"Do you see those half-inch cracks between the planks?" I saw the cracks and thought some contractor was going to be damned for his carelessness.

"My idea," said my friend, "I beat the sanitary officer to it for once. If we had built those tables with green boards close together the lumber would have dried out and there would have been cracks to catch the food crumbs. That is one of the forethoughts from the very start, to make Camp Zachary Taylor a healthy place in which to live. This little precaution will be one of the preventers of Mr. Fly during the summer months," concluded the officer.

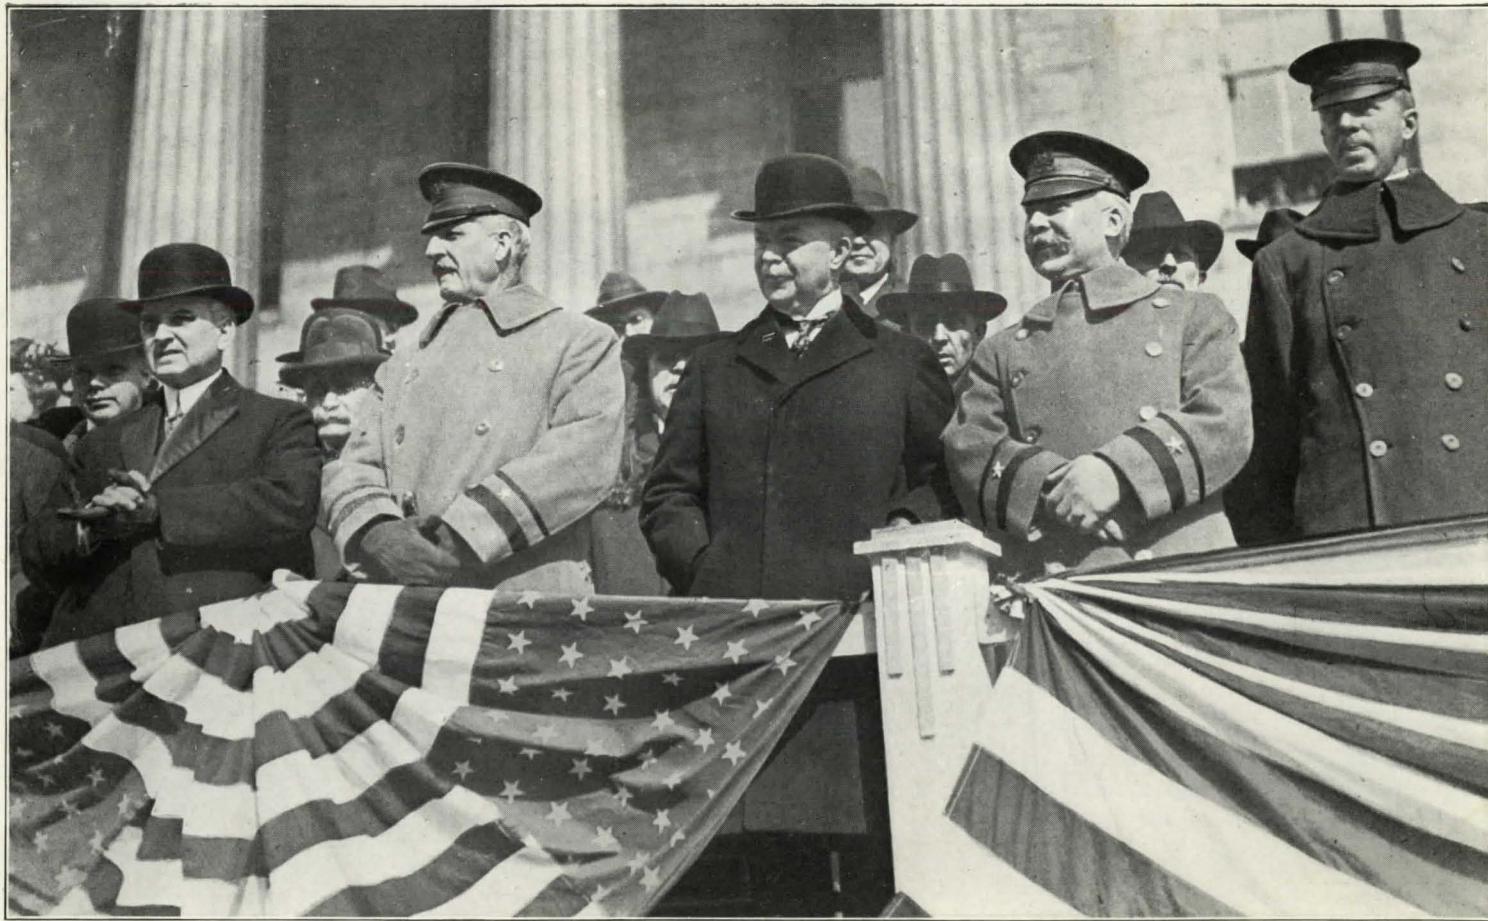

"Sanitary officer is a sort of a bogey man around here," I ventured. But the officer was really serious when he replied: "He is the man to talk about. Everybody believes him and he has done wonders. He got rid of the mosquitoes and for miles around the camp ponds and streams have been oiled."

A Real Benefit.

You, my friend, can be sure that never was such painstaking care exercised in making this home for soldierly instruction healthful for the man in uniform. And if your boy is one of the many thousand, the benefit is going to be his in more ways than I can tell here.

I have described the general plan of the home of your soldier and will tell you something about where he sleeps.

The second floor of the barrack building and parts of the first are used for sleeping quarters for about two hundred men.

REVIEW OF THE PARADE ON WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

Mayor Smith of Louisville; Brig. Gen. Wilbur Wilder; Mayor Galvin of Cincinnati; Brig. Gen. Frank D. Webster.

In these two big rooms the boys bunk, their neat iron cots as in a fire house. Each man is given 500 cubic feet of air for his own, so that the cots are not too near each other. The barracks are lighted by electricity and great stoves are used to heat the buildings. The officers' quarters are heated by steam drawn from small heating plants in the rear of the buildings.

The officers' quarters, a single story in height, are similar in general construction to the barracks. The men at Camp Zachary Taylor are thoroughly democratic. Your boy or any other boy will be sure to have the same treatment, the same housing, the same fare when they reach this cantonment. There are neither bulldogs nor privately kept motor cars here. It is theoretical democracy reduced to plain hard practice.

As I said before, the camp was built for one full division and many other units. When this was written there was the skeleton organization of a division in training at the camp. A division at Camp Zachary Taylor consists of four regiments of infantry, three regiments of artillery, two of which are light artillery and the other motorized heavy artillery; three machine gun battalions, a field signal battalion, four train, supply, ammunition, sanitary and headquarters troop and military police, three brigade headquarters, the division headquarters and its staff. The infantry regiments are composed of 250 men to a company with twelve companies to a regiment. One machine gun company of 200 men and smaller organizations known as the headquarters and supply companies and medical detachments. The artillery regiments are made up of six batteries of 190 men each, while the engineers' regiment has 1,098 men and officers.

What It Cost Uncle Sam.

This military city for the soldiers has been a center of great activity and Uncle Sam has spent close to $6,000,000 in constructing it. The number of employes working on it one week jumped to 10,000 men and special trains were required to carry the men to and from the camp to their homes in the city.

After ninety days of hard work, including Sundays, the first lots of drafted men reported for military duty on September 5, 1917. I was one of several newspaper correspondents who witnessed the entrance of the first drafted men from the three states to pass into Camp Zachary Taylor. The honor went to Lester C. Monk, a twenty-two-year-old farmer from Jersey County, Illinois. It was just 9:03 o'clock on that September morning when this young son of democracy became a member of the camp. Next came Ward H. McCormack, a Shriner from Bedford, Ind., the first Indianian to report, and soon afterwards came John Lee Herbert of 1717 Payne street, Louisville, and the first Louisville and Kentucky man to report for military service under the selective service law.

These men were pleased with their reception and commented on how the stretches and surroundings of Camp Zachary Taylor impressed them. On that day these soldiers ate their first food in military life. The menu was palatable to all and consisted of sirloin steak with brown gravy, mashed potatoes, stewed tomatoes, peach roll, bread and butter and ice tea. That was the food the government served the selected man on that day.

FIRST MAN EXAMINED IN KENTUCKY FOR THE DRAFT

School For Cooks.

When these men first arrived the great problem was to feed them. Taking a lot of raw men strange to military service and make good cooks out of them offhand was an impossible thing. So the government enlisted the aid of many large hotel proprietors to recruit chefs and professional cooks to establish a cooks' and bakers' school for the training of men in the drafted army. Today there are young men who were in the selected lot who are excellent cooks and can prepare food with economy and make it palatable to the soldier. The graduates of the school were scattered out among the various regiments to carry their learning to others.

The first human that faces a young soldier when he strikes the camp is always the medical officer. He gets acquainted with him before he does with his captain. Because Uncle Sam insists on his children being protected against any disease that can be prevented. Then come the inoculations for typhoid, para-typhoid and vaccinations. Every soldier must take three injections of the vaccine, or as it is commonly called "shots." These inoculations come every ten days until three are given. He must also be vaccinated until successful results have been obtained.

The wonderful success of the inoculations as a preventive against typhoid at this cantonment is marked because not a single case of typhoid fever has developed since the camp opened. The same is true of small pox vaccinations. Not a case of small pox has been discovered where the man has been successfully vaccinated.

I saw these young selects during the first days they spent at the camp and witnessed the start of their training. Today they do not appear to be the same men. I heard the following instructions given the raw recruits on the correct manner to stand at attention. This is the very first instruction given you in the army: The feet are turned out equally forming an angle of about forty-five degrees; knees are kept straight; without stiffness; hips drawn back slightly, body erect and resting equally on the hips; the chest is lifted and arched, shoulders squared and falling equally; the arms and hands hang naturally with the thumbs along the seam of the trousers; head erect and squarely to the front; eyes straight to the front and the body resting evenly on the heels and balls of the feet.

The Salute.

That's the set-up these soldiers learned before anything else, for it is the basis of all drills. Next came the mark of respect to the uniform. The salute. It was a common sight those days to see a lone soldier standing to one side learning individually the proper manner to bring his arm up with a snap and bring it down just as sharply.

In those first days I wondered if it was hard work. It is. There are sore arms, the legs ache, the feet become sore and blistered and the whole body seems weary and tired. But the men soon learned to execute the commands with perfect ease. Drilling hardens the muscles and the aches quickly disappeared.

No, dear mothers, you have no cause to worry, for out at this camp they are making strong and stalwart men out of weaklings.

Here is the daily routine of a day's work in this camp. You can readily see there is not much time for any loafing. It prevails every day with exception of Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday:

FIRST INDIANA MAN REPORTING TO HIS UNIT

Reveille	5:45 a. m.
Assembly	6:00 a. m.
Breakfast	6:30 a. m.
Sick call	7:00 a. m.
First drill call	7:20 a. m.
Assembly drill call	7:30 a. m.
Recall	11:30 a. m.
Mess call	12:00 noon
First call afternoon drill	12:50 p. m.
Assembly for drill	1:00 p. m.
Recall	5:00 p. m.
Retreat	5:30 p. m.
Supper	5:35 p. m.
Tattoo (call to quarters)	9:30 p. m.
Taps	10:30 p. m.

You can see how busy the soldier lad is during his eight hours of the twenty-four. Of course he is not only out learning the formations in extended order and closed drill. As he lived longer in the camp there was formed many schools, each that gives instruction for every angle of military training for the modern soldier. Even the physicians that gave up their civil practice have daily schools and devote a greater number of their nights to careful study of modern surgery and sanitation, many new points that have been developed by the great war. It is all done so that the fighting forces of the United States may be fully protected by the most modern methods to preserve their health and lives.

The Sanitary Train.

The friends and relatives of the soldiers of the Eighty-Fourth Division can rest assured that when the division does its bit on the front line it will be protected by an able and efficient ambulance corps. There is assigned to the Sanitary Train, a tactical unit of the division, two ambulance companies officered by capable officers and a fine personnel of enlisted men. These companies have already won laurels many miles from the battle line by their thorough and valiant service in the caring and handling of a railroad wreck that cost forty-nine lives near Louisville.

So that every soldier will learn the best method to beat the brutal Hun every man is detailed to a school of some kind.

This includes the intensive training with the bayonet, the grenade and machine guns. The bayonet and grenade work is considered two of the important phases of the modern school of fighting. The officers and men alike are detailed as students to this class, which is a sub-class of the Infantry School of Arms. Here they are taught the fine points of bayonet work under the eye of graduates of the Cambridge School of Bayonet Work.

The classes usually last about fifteen days. During the second week the classes are taken into the training trenches where there is actual combat with bayonets with the students wearing the safety plastron, steel gloves and wire helmets. These husky soldiers find it great fun to get down in the bottom of a trench and there fight a real battle with another soldier. Of course wooden bayonets are used but many are the telling blows that are given and taken by the participants. This class also has a French officer who has seen action and been wounded, who acts as an adviser to the chief instructor.

FIRST QUOTA OF SELECTED MEN FROM KENTUCKY ARRIVES AT THE CHUTES

The Grenade Class.

The same can be said of the grenade class. Through the originality of Col. Hugh D. Wise, commandant of the school, Camp Zachary Taylor had the first live grenades in the country. Smarting under the delay the class was suffering in not having explosive grenades, Col. Wise constructed a grenade made of black powder and cement and had it made so that it would strike on a match box. In this manner the classes have had some valuable training in the "wafting" of these grenades in barrage fires and night raids. The physical culture class of this school should not be forgotten either. Here an able instructor assisted by Packey McFarland, noted boxer, teach the men the manly art of self defense. This is not the only thing that is taught the men, however. Every sort of sport that will tend to make the men afraid of nothing and that will develop the muscles is indulged. They have a play hour each day the same as the rest of the division does. One hour each day the men are allowed to play baseball, football and handball, besides many other new games that help the man's physical fitness.

In closing this narrative I may say that Camp Zachary Taylor is commanded by a man that has won his way into the hearts of his men, a man that in every sense is a true and brave soldier and one that the soldiers of the big camp should be proud of. That man is Major General Harry C. Hale, who came all the way from China to take command of the Eighty-Fourth Division.

It has been shown that every possible care has been taken to safeguard the health of the men who are being trained in Camp Zachary Taylor. But to make a good soldier you must keep him happy as well as healthy, and to this side of the problem the War Department has devoted a great deal of attention. The Commission of Training Camp Activities is a voluntary body composed of men known in philanthropic work and social service, and on it devolves the task of watching the moral conditions in the environs of the camp and of reporting to the department at Washington when steps must be taken for their betterment.

Entertainment Features.

In Camp Zachary Taylor the sub-committee of the War Recreation Board works with the Y. M. C. A and other agencies in providing the young soldier with all forms of healthy recreation and amusement during the periods of training. Every regiment has its own buildings. Here writing material and reading matter is provided. Here educational classes under competent instructors are held and entertainments such as lectures and moving pictures are offered. In the main auditorium and Liberty Theater such entertainments are offered on a much larger scale. A number of well known theatrical managers have arranged bookings of their best plays which are being sent to the camp for the benefit of the soldiers. Clean sports of all kinds are fostered, the outdoor games being under the supervision of men prominent in the athletic world.

Those who have been called to the colors, those whose husbands, whose sons and brothers must soon leave home to serve in their country's armies, will find cheer and comfort in the preparation that has been made for the wellbeing of our soldiers in the first stages of their training that will not end until they have "gone over the top" in France. Certainly the government has spared no effort to provide properly for them.
